Ambassador Expectations and Code of Conduct

Tidy Butt Community Ambassadors

1. Our Mission and Why This Matters

Tidy Butt is about community, connection, conversation, and support.

It exists because people struggle, people feel isolated, people go through difficult times, and sometimes what makes the difference is not a service or a programme, but people showing up for each other.

Being an ambassador is not about status or titles.

It is about helping create spaces where people feel welcome, supported, and not alone.

As an ambassador, you are helping to build: - Community - Connection - Conversation - Support - Belonging - Understanding - Positive action.

Everything in this document comes back to those ideas.

2. What We Expect from Ambassadors

Ambassadors are not expected to be experts, counsellors, or organisers of everything. But some expectations help keep the community safe, welcoming, and supportive.

At the heart of the ambassador role is this:

You are there to: - Listen - Encourage - Support - Signpost - Welcome - Connect people - Help create a safe and positive environment

You are not there to: - Fix people's problems - Give professional advice - Take responsibility for someone's wellbeing - Carry everything on your own

You are part of a community, not responsible for the community alone.

3. Commitment, Reliability, and Being Honest About Life

This is really important and needs to be realistic.

We know life happens.

Work happens. Family happens. Health happens. Stress happens. Things change.

So, the expectation is not that you are always available or always able to help.

The expectation is honesty and transparency.

If you: - Can't attend something - Need to step back for a while - Are feeling overwhelmed - Can't commit regularly - Have too much on - Need a break - No longer have the time you thought, you did

Just tell us. Early if possible.

Transparency is key.

We want this to work for you and for Tidy Butt, not for you to feel pressured or guilty.

Please: - Don't overcommit - Don't feel you have to say yes to everything - Let us know as early as possible if you can't attend something - Let us know if your availability changes - Let us know if you need to step back temporarily

It is always okay to say:

"I can't commit to that right now."

"I need to take a step back for a bit."

"I can help occasionally but not regularly."

That honesty helps us plan and keeps everything running smoothly.

4. Community Behaviour and Conduct

Ambassadors help set the tone for the community.

We expect ambassadors to: - Treat everyone with respect - Be welcoming and inclusive - Be patient and understanding - Avoid judgement or criticism - Avoid arguments or confrontation - Help people feel comfortable and included - Use appropriate language at events and online - Help create a positive environment - Raise concerns if something doesn't feel right.

This applies to: - In-person events - Online groups - social media - Messaging groups - Public events - Conversations where you are representing Tidy Butt.

5. Online Behaviour and Representing Tidy Butt

This is really important.

When you are acting as an ambassador, attending events, posting about Tidy Butt, or interacting in the community, you are representing Tidy Butt, not just yourself.

You should always be your authentic self and be genuine, but just remember:

If you are wearing Tidy Butt, you are part of Tidy Butt.

So when representing Tidy Butt: - Be respectful online - Avoid arguments or confrontations online - Avoid posting things that could damage the community or organisation - Be positive and supportive in community spaces - Don't share private information about individuals or situations - Don't speak on behalf of the organisation unless asked to - Don't create events or groups using the Tidy Butt name without agreement.

A simple way to think about it:

Tidy Butt will support and protect you as an ambassador,
But you also have a responsibility to protect Tidy Butt in return.

This is about mutual respect and trust.

6. Boundaries and Supporting People Safely

This is one of the most important parts of being an ambassador.

You are not expected to be a counsellor, therapist, or support worker.

Your role is to: - Listen - Encourage - Signpost - Support - Connect people - Let organisers know if you are worried about someone

You should not: - Try to fix everything - Take responsibility for someone's wellbeing - Keep serious concerns to yourself - Promise confidentiality if someone may be at risk - Put yourself in situations where you feel responsible for someone - Carry difficult situations alone

If you are worried about someone, the expectation is simple:

Tell one of the organisers. Do not try to manage it alone.

You are part of a group for a reason.

7. Looking After Yourself

Supporting others can sometimes be emotionally tiring.

Ambassadors should: - Not take on too much - Ask for help when needed - Take breaks when needed - Step back if things feel overwhelming - Talk to organisers if they are struggling - Remember they are volunteers, not responsible for everything.

You cannot support others if you are exhausted or overwhelmed.

Looking after yourself is part of the role.

8. Raising Concerns, Problems, or Issues

We want ambassadors to feel comfortable raising concerns.

This could include: - Concerns about someone's safety or wellbeing - Concerns about behaviour at events - Concerns about another ambassador - Concerns about something that doesn't feel right - Suggestions for improvement - Conflicts or disagreements - Ideas for new activities or improvements.

If something doesn't feel right, it's usually worth mentioning.

9. If Expectations Are Not Met

This section is not about punishment.

It is about protecting the community and everyone involved.

If an ambassador: - Behaves in a way that harms the community - Breaks confidentiality - Acts inappropriately online or at events - Repeatedly commits and does not show up - Acts against the values of the organisation - Creates unsafe situations

Then the organisation may: - Have a conversation with them - Provide guidance or support - Ask them to step back temporarily - Remove them from the ambassador role if necessary.

This would always be handled respectfully and fairly.

10. Simple Summary – What Being an Ambassador Really Means

Being an ambassador really comes down to this:

- Be kind
- Be welcoming
- Be respectful
- Be reliable
- Be honest about your availability
- Don't overcommit
- Listen
- Encourage
- Support
- Signpost
- Help people feel part of something
- Look after yourself as well as others
- Help keep the community safe
- Represent Tidy Butt in a positive way

If you do those things, you are doing the role well.
